Co-Founder and Principal of the Etiquette Now! Team

Good Manners are the key to opening doors of opportunity.

Rebecca Black is a credentialed teacher, etiquette specialist, writer, co-founder and principal of Etiquette Now! with nearly thirty years of experience. She worked as a teacher and in the teaching field with the Elk Grove Unified School District from 1977-1994. In 1994, Rebecca retired from the classroom to focus on writing and teaching her favorite subject: Etiquette. Her partner, Walker Black, MBA, is a retired management analyst with over twenty-six years experience in local government.

Etiquette Now! designs and presents custom etiquette workshops for individual, educational, government, and business clients. From Professional Presence to Business Meals, our classes and workshops are designed to bring more civility into our lives.

We present energetic exciting workshops that offer behaviors and skills that benefit workshop participants in their professional and personal lives. We teach people skills! Our participants are taken seriously.

On the Literary Front

Rebecca answers questions from all over the world through our sites Got Etiquette? (advice, articles, and interviews--media coverage) and The Wedding Portal (all things wedding related). She writes a monthly article for her newsletters and weekly articles for Yahoo Contributor's Network. She has moderated online for Top Wedding Questions, Pop the Question, and I Do Take Two. Her articles are published in many publications all over the world. Additionally, numerous printed publications and online sites have profiled her.
